Pittsburgh Gazette.

FRIDAY MORNING, MAY 7, 1819.

AT this period, when our gardens and the whole country are decked in all the embellishments of spring, every thing appears laughing and joyful. The first words pronounced by the Creator, produced all these splendid effects. The hand alone of the Monarch of the Universe, has revivified the earth, and, in a manner, produced a new world for the gratification and enjoyment of his creatures. It is HE who calls the spring from the south; it is HIS nod that drives the "ruffian blasts of winter" to other climes. Man, try what thy wisdom can do!—Canst thou clothe in verdure, a single bush? canst thou produce a single leaf? canst thou command a single flower to burst forth into loveliness? Approach ye learned artists, ye skilful painters, ye ornithologists, ye botanists, who boast of being able to detect nature in her deepest recesses, and of imitating her most obscure characteristics, examine these master pieces with scrupulous exactness! is any thing wanting to complete their perfection? can you find any defect in the mingling of the colours, in their forms, or in their proportions? Can your pencils express the dazzling red of the peach blossom? Can you imitate the uniformity the simplicity, of the garb of the cherry tree! But why talk of rivalling? Are you capable of feeling the magnificence of restored nature, and of appreciating the powers of the Most High? If we had no other proofs upon earth of his wisdom, the flowers alone of spring, are sufficient to carry conviction of the fact!

An infinite diversity is remarked among the blossoms of our trees; all are handsome, but not equally so; there are none, however, which are not estimable for some peculiar quality. However magnificent the Creator is in the distribution of his gifts, he reserves to himself the liberty of bestowing on some, more than on others; but this difference only takes place in contingent qualities; one tree, for instance, has flowers of a dazzling white; those of another are shaded and streaked; the charms of a third are enhanced by the delicious perfume which is exhaled from the blossoms; but all these varieties are only accidental, and have no effect upon their fecundity.—Thus, when the Supreme Being has not favoured us with the same external advantages that distinguish some of our fellow creatures, we ought not to be discouraged or afflicted. The want of some peculiar attractions, diminishes not our well being. If we are not equally rich, equally handsome, we may yet be equally virtuous, and equally agreeable both to God and man. Provided we carry with us the real principles of piety and virtue, we possess true beauty. Why do the the blossoms of our fruit trees inspire us with more pleasure than the rich colours of the tulip, the pink, or the rose? It is because the gratification from these last, is short lived and evanescent! the others leave us the pleasing anticipation of their delicious fruit. Limit not then your wishes to the splendour and external charms of a mere flower. The beauty, the grace, the loveliness of health, and all the other advantages of this nature, are not what procure us permanent enjoyment. The flowers which promise fruit agreeable to the Great Supreme are those only which merit our attention, & whose charms never fade.

The following excellent commentary on the Opinion of the Supreme Court, published in the last Argus is

FROM THE RICHMOND ENQUIRER.

HIGH LIFE BELOW STAIRS

Or great Definitions tested by common things.

"But indeed—my dear, dear Deborah, you must not—Why these fine shawls & caps, and chairs and couches, and all these supefluous gewgews? You run me in debt, and into jail, and finally I shall lose all my patience, and I will not answer the consequences. I will get a divorce, if you dont take care; and then my dear Deborah, what will become of you? Without a good husband to take care of you, what is a woman like you to do in this world? You say you have a right to do all these things. But why do you not show it? You & I married with a knowledge of all the difficulties we were to meet,—I told you I married you for such and such purposes; that I was willing to give up a part of my rights to you, because I expected you would make a good prudent & thoughtful house wife. You were to have all things necessary for you; and as I was unwilling and unable to indulge you in all the extravagancies you might fall into, that you were to have no more than was necessary for yourself and the station you were to fill. This was expressly understood in our marriage settlement; and yet, here you are, stretching your powers, wasting my means, trying to wear the breeches on all occasions, and in a word, my dear Deborah, making me utterly insignificant and ridiculous in the eyes of all my acquaintances," Deborah, however, was not to be put off in this way. She had words at will, and with what emphasis did she ring all the charges upon the word necessary, so important a feature in the marriage contract! "Necessary, (exclaimed Deborah,) well, and have I done one thing, or got a single article that was not necessary? Necessary, quotha! Well, and is not this shawl, and cap and curtain, necessary articles? How can I do without them? Why, what do you call necessary? Look at the use which neighbor Dobbins, and cousin Dick make of it—or turn up Sam's grammar, or his "Spelling made Easy," and see if it means any more than that one thing is convenient, or useful, or essential to another? Ask brother Jonathan, if it don't mean (as I heard him once say) any thing calculated to produce the end; any means conducive to my end, leaving me to choose which I please.—Well, here is my beautiful shawl you talk so much about. Tell me, Darby, is it not very convenient? This soft cushion chair, is it not very convenient to sit upon? You complain of my extravagance, but look around you, and point out, if you can, the least thing that is not convenient, or useful, conducive to some purpose, or calculated to effect some end that I have in view.—Why then, Darby, are you always grumbling so? Always railing at me, at this rate, when you know I do nothing that is not for our general welfare? You really would confine me to limits that are too narrow. I will not be so controlled—I will have more of my own way. I cannot bear thus to be kept in leading strings. Necessary indeed! Why every thing that I have got is useful or convenient; and I tell you, once for all, that you may grumble as you will, but I'll construe my marriage settlement so as to mean any thing or nothing. If you don't like this construction, why, help yourself as well as you can—Nobody can blame me."

Such were the strains which Deborah was pouring forth in the ears of the astonished husband, which I, Timothy Tug, a neigbour and a friend of both, chanced to hear this morning, as I went forth to breath the fresh air. I thought it was high time to preven this matrimonial squabble going any further, and I appeared before the anxious pair, in time for Deborah to frame the last words she employed to meet my ear—"Nobody can blame me." I thought Deborah was wrong, and frankly told her so. "Indeed, Mrs. Deborah, you must excuse me, but I have read your marriage articles, and do not agree with you in the extended sense you are willing to give them. First you say, necessary in these articles may mean convenient, useful, or essential. Why, if this be so, it may mean (as one of the fathers of your church said about another word) any thing or nothing—for, if it mean all the things you say, it may mean any thing. For, see how inconsistent you are with yourself. Is it synonomous with convenient or essential. Now are you not aware of the contradictory meaning of these two phrases? Essential is as strong a word as you can us: but when you say covenient, do you not see how inconsistent you are with yourself, to use terms of such an opposite description? You try to make out that which is merely convenient constitutes the very essence of a thing; or in other words, it is essential and it is not essential. Say then which do you mean, that you are to have every thing that is essential or convenient merely? The spirit of aggrandizement leads you to employ the softest word; convenient—but will common language bear you out in this phraseology? A physician tells his sick patient, it is convenient for you to have a blister—no indeed, says the patient, it is not, and I will not have one. But, replies the physician, it is necessary for you to have one. Who does not see the difference; the trembling patient immediately discards all his scruples, and submits to the law of necessity. In fact, go through the world, and see how strongly convenience & necessity are contrasted together. Apply it to the most common as well as the most important situations, and how very different from each other is a thing's being convenient only, and being necessary. Why, then, will you loose sight of the obvious distinctions of things, and then beguile yourself into the exercise of a power you have no right to claim?"

"No right, (exclaimed Deborah) how can you say so, when the highest judicial authority in this land has pronounced that the word nesessary frequently imports no more than that one thing is convenient, or useful, or essential to another? So I have law at least on my side, if I have nothing else."

LATEST FROM SOUTH AMERICA.

EASTPORT, (MAINE,) APRIL 10.

☞ By the Leon, Woodward, arrived at this port, yesterday, from Trinidad, we received from a very intelligent gentleman, at that place, and who very recently returned from the theatre of war, the following

Brief Abstract of the latest Intelligence from VENEZUELA.

PORT-SPAIN, March 15, 1819.

Late dispatches received at Augostura, from Gen. Pæz, dated the 15th ult.—announced the retreat of the Spanish army over the Arauca. Morillo, after an ineffectual attempt, to bring Pæz to a general action, was rapidly retracing his steps towards the Apune. His object is to regain the cultivated country, finding it impossible to draw supplies from the plains, in which he was harrassed continually by 2500 cavalry. The detachments he had sent out in quest of subsistence had been uniformly cut off by Pæz's cavalry, and, from the time of crossing the Arauca till that of his re-crossing it, and marching as far as Conception, Morillo had lost 1400 men and a field piece. He had circulated (in writing) a boastful proclamation to Vaneros, or Inhabitants of the plains, dated the 5th, to which Pæz had replied by a keenly satirical address (by way of comment) on the 15th February.

The artillery and infantry, (2000) left on the Island before Urbana, in the Oronoco, were proceeding by forced marches to re-unite themselves with Pæz. They will be reinforced by 420 English & Irish soldiers, it having been Bolivar's intention to await there the arrival of 2000 English, daily expected, &c. General Bolivar set out from Angostura on the 27th ultimo on his return to the army.

Col. Hursler's regiment and the remainder of Col. English's expedition are looked for daily. They will probably be associated with the 600 landed at Margarita, whither general Urdometa and Valdez, Col. Needham (the adjutant general of that division) have gone with about 60 English sailors, who will assist in manning gun boats or other vessels. Associated with 500 Margaritanians, &c.—they will make a descent upon the coast at—— and form a junction with the division collected in the provinces of Barcelona and Cumana, to be commanded by general Marinos; Sarazas,' Monagas' & perhaps Bermendez' forces will constitute this army. Monagas was at the point of death, from an attack of fever. News of decisive operations may be looked for from day to day. Should these forces not complete the object of independence, though the supposition is improbable, the troops to arrive from England will unquestionably expel the remnant of Morillo's corps from Venezuela. This will be a work of the greater facility, as Morillo has suffered greatly.

Pæz writes that the prisoners taken were more like skeletons than living men. Add to this, he, Morillo, has above 400 miles of plains to traverse, exposed continually to the enemy's cavalry, his own being annihilated, and not a head of cattle in his camp.

The Congress was deliberating on various regulations, and on a fundamental law, or constitution, to be proposed to the people for their approbation. This is the substance of the latest news. More important events will soon challenge more regard than this hasty epitome.

We also received by the above vessel, Trinidad papers to the 13th ult. but they contain nothing of importance.

WASHINGTON CITY, April 20.

Mr. Bagot, the British minister, with his family, left this city for Annapolis on Friday last, where, it is said, he will await the arrival of a British frigate, which is daily expected there to convey him to England. Mr. Bagot has been the most popular, and therefore, the most useful minister that his government has ever sent to this country. The strict propriety of his deportment, and the urbanity of his manners, whilst here, have been such as to secure him the respect and esteem of all people of all parties, as far as our knowledge extends; and to cause his retirement from his station here to be generally and sincerely regretted.—*Nat. The Mayor of the city of Washington has offered 500 dollars reward for information relative to the incendiaries, suspected to have been the cause of the late fires in that place.

The steam boat Charleston, bound to Charleston, was stopped at Wappoo, on the 8th inst. by about 1000 rafts, which completely blocked up the river.

Shad.—These wholesome auxiliaries to our market, and comfortable relief every season, to all classes have never been known so plenty as at present—seventeen hundred were caught at one haul on Monday last, in the Delaware—The cheapness with which they may be procured, and the advantage in curing them for the warmer season, has been a great blessing to our numerous and increasing population.—They have been sold at $ 4 50 per hundred.

Official accounts received at Havanna from Caracas, state that Gen. Morillo reviewed on the 30th of January, a great part of the army which was assembled on the plains of San Fernando de Apure, with intent to commence the operations of the campaign. The General was highly pleased with the fine appearance, strict discipline, and elegant military evolutions of the army then assembled, and considered it the most formidable that had ever trod the soil of Venezuela. On the 1st Feb. the army moved from San Fernando de Apure, and on the 2d & 3d forced the passages of the rivers Arauca and Canjaral, which Pæz and his followers in vain attempted to defend. On the 5th General Morillo's head quarters were at Nuevo Paso del Rey, whence he intended to advance on the following day in pursuit of the enemy, with a view to finish at once what he considered the last campaign in Venezuela.

From the Providence, Rhode Island Patriot of April 17.

The ship Lion, Townsend, arrived here from Canton, has brought to this country, three natives of Madison's Island, in the South Sea, which it will be recollected, was taken possession of by capt. Porter, in the frigate Essex, in November, 1813, for the United States. Two of them are young men, upwards of 20 years old, probably, and the other a lad of about 12. They are copper coloured, and tattooed according to their custom, by puncturing the skin and introducing a dark liquid, which has a singular appearance. They appear to be inoffensive youths, and as they are American citizens, having been adopted into the great American family, we trust they will be treated with kindness and hospitality.

INDIA.

There is reason to believe that some movements have taken place among the natives of India, with intent to abolish the practice of burning widows with the corpses of their husbands; for we learn from a Calcutta Journal, that "a petition counter to that of those natives who prayed for a repeal of the orders of government restricting the privilege of suicide of widows to such sases only as are authorised by the Hindoo Shastres, is now in circulation for signature." This petition states that the principal authorities of the Hindoo religion altogether forbid the burning of women on the funeral piles of their husbands—that those legislators of inferior authority who have authorised the practice, wrote in a different age, when many similar sacrifices, forbidden to the race of mankind in the present age (Kali Yoog) were common; such as human sacrifices, leaping from precipices, &c.—and that even they recommend a life of austerity as more meritorious than such self-destruction.

Upon these grounds they pray that such further measures to check, if not entirely put an end to sacrifices so revolting to humanity, may be adopted, as the government may in its wisdom deem expedient.

MASSACHUSETTS ELECTION.

Returns of votes for Governor have been received from about 400 towns; and it is ascertained that the present Chief Magistrate is re-elected by a majority of between 5 and 6000 votes.—Boston Pat.

DIED, in Goa, (India) Cayeton Count STEINACH, of Donnerpagh, in Styria, a private in the British 84th regt. of infantry. Losing his mother when young, his father Charles Count Steinach, married a second wife, who proved so troublesome to the deceased that he quitted Hungary, and enlisted in one of the British German regiments, served in Egypt under Abercrombie, and in Italy under Count Maida; and when the regiment was ordered home, he was, at his own request, and to keep at a distance from his family, transferred to the 84th regiment, which proceeded to India. His father soon after died; and the regimental agent gave him information of the event, and that he was heir to the rich and noble family of Steinach. Measures were taken to discharge him from the service, in which his adverse fate had doomed him to linger.

But whilst cherishing the anxious hope of returning to his native land with dignity and honor, after many years harpships and of spending the remainder of his chequered life in the enjoyment of a noble independence, he was taken sick, sent to the hospital, and died. The record of this event has recently been transmitted to Germany by the British Governor of Bombay.

Extraordinary Mushroom.—A phenomenon which tends much to elucidate the origin and nature of vegetable funguses, particularly of that species named mushroom, lately occurred to the observation of sir Joseph Banks. Having a cask of wine rather too sweet for immediate use, he directed that it should be placed in a cellar, that the saccharine matter it contained might be more perfectly decomposed by age. At the end of three years he directed his buttler to ascertain the state of the wine, when, on attempting to open the cellar door, he could not effect it, in consequence of some powerful obstacle. The door was consequently cut down, when the cellar was found to be completely filled with a firm fungous vegetable production, so firm that it was necessary to use an axe for its removal! This appeared to have grown from, or to have been nourished by, the decomposed particles of the wine, the cask being empty, and carried up to the ceiling, where it was supported by the surface of the fungus.

BROKE out of the prison of this county, by the aid of fire, on the night of Friday the 23d inst. a convict, whose real name, I believe is but who was tried and convicted under the fictitious name of JOSEPH DONELLY.

He is an Irishman, about 20 or 21 years of age, 5 feet 9 or 10 inches high, of a very fair complexion, and has a narrow eschar running obliquely across the upper part of his nose. His clothing was, when he went away, a drab great coat, almost worn out, an old castor hat, a pair coarse shoes, a new pair of chambry cotton pantaloons, and vest of the same. The above runaway is a strait, good looking, stout made fellow, but a noted scoundrel, and would make use of the most dangerous means to escape the punishment of guilt.

The above reward will be paid for securing the above convict in any jail, and giving me information thereof.

The following extract of a letter from gentleman in England, to his brother this place, confirms in a lively manner e late numerous accounts which have en published in our Journals, respect- the dreadful pressure in that country. men, it gives us no pleasure to hear the miseries of our fellow creatures, any part of the globe; at present, how- er, our sympathies are almost mono- lized, by the embarrassments of our n citizens. We confess that we an- cipate much future benefit from the pre- nt distress; our politicians will have eir eyes forced open to our real inter- sts, and more than likely the genius of anufactures may e'er long fix his resi- nce permanently on the American hore. If these anticipations be realiz- d, our embarrassments will, at a future ay, afford us a pleasant subject for re- rospection, and we may exclaim with the first genius and moralist the world ver saw,

"Sweet are the uses of adversity,
"Which like a toad, ugly and venomous,
"Yet bears a precious jewel in its head."

Extract of a Letter from England.

"There has been a sharp debate on the Regent's message concerning the 58,000*l.* ranted to the late Queen. The Regent laims it as his right, but gives it up ith a show of generosity to parliament, dispose of, recommending 25,000*l.* per nnum to be given among the late Queen's rvants and dependants, and 10,000*l.* r annum to the Duke of York for going own to Windsor now and then to see ow the old man goes on. The principle f the Regent's right to the 50,000*l.* was rmly disputed in both houses. Mr. ierney has also divided the house on the bject of the cash payments at the Bank f England; ministers had a majority of 09, but they are likely to be much below is on many occasions, as the monied en are all in favor of the paper delusion, hich will eventually crush the country, hen the day of reckoning comes. The opular voice gets stronger every day; a eekly paper published by one Sheredin, ecommends the people to provide them- elves with arms in order to resist the overnment and depose the Prince!! his is now common language, and the inisters dare not prosecute, as the ju- es will not find a verdict for the crown; n explosion must soon take place, but ccident commonly determines when.— The new parliament will do nothing but alk about reforming abuses, and the na- ion is most heartily sick of such talk.— Bread is now in London 1s 3d per quar- tern loaf of four pounds 5 oz Beef 9d veal 8d per pound; flour 3s 10d per stone of 14 lbs. malt 12s 6d per bushel.

In what light is Mr. Cobbett regarded with you? he is completely cut up by all parties here; his letter about his debts, & Sir Francis Burdett's reply have done him up. There have been various public meetings against the corn bill and if the price of wheat continues to advance, the clamour will increase and compel minis- ters to repeal that obnoxious law. The artizans of Birmingham cannot live when in full work; the price of labor is so low, all remunerating "occupations gone" & the poor rates are hourly making them paupers. Hundreds and thousands would follow your example and emigrate to America, or even to New Holland, if they had but the means."

Female Seminary at Har- mony.

AN examination of the pupils took place on the 3d inst. in the presence of the subscribers, trustees of the Institu- tion, and of several ladies & gentlemen. The Pupils were examined upon Arith- metick, Grammar, use of the Globes, Geography, Ancient and Modern His- tory, and specimens of their writ- ting were exhibited. Their cheer- ful and contented countenances, the readiness of their answers to the ques- tions put to them, on those various branches, accompanied with the graces of their manners, afforded a high degree of satisfaction to all the visitors. In regard to drawing, many specimens ex- ecuted by the Pupils, in the figure of landscape and flower, were produced, together with maps of the globe and of its parts, which evinced a taste and re- lish for the fine arts. Some of them also executed on the piano-forte in a manner which gave great satisfaction. It was evident from the progress they had made, that the Seminary well merited the patro- nage of all those parents and guardians who feel it the first of duties to train youth in the principles of knowledge, pi- ety and virtue.—It was manifest that the greatest industry and fidelity had been exercised by their instructors, Mr. and Mrs. Eckstein, and the young lady who has been pleased to teach the piano-for- te. The neatness and good appearance of the young ladies left no room to doubt of the care and attention of Mrs. Moun- tain, who conducts the domestic concern of the Institution.

NO. V.

"O! the times and the manners."

Mankind seem to be generally inclined to depart, as far as possible, from the pre- cepts of nature, and to prove, while they undertake to remedy her defects. It matters not how great the merit or per- sonal beauty of these innovators may be; as long as they neglect making, by their own exertions, some addition to their at- tractions, they imagine something is wan- ting to render them perfect.

A celebrated toast, though naturally possessed of a fine colour and an easy carriage, thinks it absolutely necessary to use rouge, and torture herself with corsetts, that she may have a more bloom- ing complexion, and stately gait. Patch- es, tastefully arranged on the face, have a very fine effect; a lisp is considered as an evidence of what the French term naivete; and some reverse the proper use of the letters V and W, to prove, I suppose, that they are as well acquainted with fashionable life as any London cockney whatever.

I sometimes visit a place of fashiona- ble amusement where our belles & beaux resort, to see and be seen. Here I have a full opportunity of observing the differ- ent degrees of affectation, as they are visible in the conduct of the assembly.— One young lady, who, doubtless thinks that she possesses a more than ordinary symmetry of form, practices every grace- ful attitude, to show it to advantage.— Another reclines in the most languishing position over the side of her box, for the same purpose, and a third, profits by ev- ery opportunity of breaking out into a hearty laugh, in order to prove the white- ness of her teeth, and attract the atten- tion of the audience.

The Spectator, in the execution of his useful office, could not omit bestowing a part of his attention on the votaries of affectation. But there are some descrip- tions of this contemptible vice, which, I believe escaped his notice, or probably they are the offspring of more modern times than those in which he flourished.

The idea formerly attached to that kind of politeness which ought to be found among the higher classes of society, seems to have undergone a considerable change of late. Instead of that nice sense of decorum which our grannums tell us, was so much in vogue in their day, we now witne s a total disregard for such effemin ate refinement. A real gentle- man of modern times, thinks it incumbent on him to amuse his company with the most obscene stories he has been able to collect; and the grosser the circumstan- ces he relates, the more credit his audi- tors award him, as a fine, jovial fellow, & a man of the world. I have witnessed conduct in some, professing themselves gentlemen, which, for downright vulgari- ty and obscenity, might almost vie with that, common in a certain part of a for- eign city, which shall be nameless. If these gentlemen happen to be present in a company of females, they are content to deal pretty freely in double entendres.

Now such grossness is all the result of affectation; and whatever those who practice it may think, is unbecoming the character they assume, and invariably, 'though imperceptibly, lessens the res- pect which every gentleman ought to command. But the evil does not stop here. Those who are fond of imitating all the fashions, and repeating all the sayings of people in the superior ranks of life, are willing to become genteelly in decent in order to appear like their bet- ters in every thing.

There is another kind of affectation, which, like the former is an admirable means of acquiring the favour of the mul- titude, by proving, in their estimation, the attainment of those rules of [illegible] the principles of equality. I allude to the studying of what is called a genteel negligence by those, who having no stron- ger foundation for their pretensions to talent, are willing to affect the character of the sloven, to give weight to the opin- ion that eccentricity is a proof of genius. These careless gentlemen will allow their stockings to be about their heels, without the least intention of displaying the fine- ness of their texture, although that cir- cumstance might never be generally known by any other means. Some are even so condescending as to wear habits of the most homely materials, & in which the ravages of time are plainly visible, and profess a great independence of pub- lic opinion so long as it ascribes their shabby appearance to choice rather than necessity. They do not consider that with all their pretensions to an austere philosophy, there are some, even in mo- dern days, wise enough to know that pride sometimes "apes humility," and may not unfrequently be seen peeping through the rents of the coarsest gar- ment.

Conduct which is prompted by a de- sire to appear more beautiful in person, or amiable in manners, however incom- petent it may be to produce such effects, can only excite pity, as the consequence of a misguided judgment. But when men, not deficient in understanding, vio- late in their conversation and actions the common rules of decency, we must des- pise them. The flimsy veil, which they attempt to throw over their conduct, is easily penetrated by every one of the least discernment. No one will readily believe, that those who are possessed of superior mental endowments, and have all their lives associated with that class of society, of which politeness is said to be the general character, would descend to vulgarity and indecency, in conse- quence of their ignorance of propriety. The only inference, then, to be drawn is, that those who are so condescendingly indelicate, are actuated by some sinister motive,—that they are seeking popular- ity, by adopting the manners of the sove- reign people, or, what is still worse, that they are indecent, purely for the pleas - ure they enjoy in being so.

Nor will any one of the smallest reflec- tion imagine, that those who appear in public, with a carelessly tied cravat, a rusty coat, or an ungartered pair of hose, must necessarily be plain in their man- ners, as well as their sentiments. Where an individual, under whatever pretext, or with whatever design, assumes an humble garb, and at the same time, is known to be both haughty and overbearing, it will be very difficult for him to derive from those who are acquainted with his real character, much credit for the appearance of humility in his dress. A toss of the head, and a sarcastic sneer at unassuming poverty, are as likely to be displayed by the brainless, affected sloven, as the spruce, dapper macaroni. If those who play the former character, think to im- pose themselves on the wise part of their species, for what they seem to be, they have yet to learn, that the man of real merit does not depend for the dis covery of his gratifications, on mere external ap- pearance, and that he who "flaunts in rags," may be as great a coxcomb, as he who "flutters in brocade."

Harrisburgh, April 24.

STATE CAPITOL.—The commissioners authorised by the late act of assembly, to receive plans for the State Capitol have approved of the one offered by Mr. Stephen Hill, architect of this borough, who has given security for building the capitol. Mr. Mills, of Baltimore, receiv- ed the second premium of $200 for the next approved plan.

We are informed by the Public Ad- vertiser printed at Louisville, that the deposites of the United States' Treasu- ry will hereafter be made in the branch of the Kentucky Bank located in that place instead of the branch of the United States' Bank. This is as it should be.

But it proves that the Branch there, is not "necessary and proper" in the col- lection of the revenue, and therefore, it is unconstitutional even on the grounds assumed by the Supreme Court.

Quere. Has the state any right to tax the Bank of Kentucky as it is now used as a "means" for collecting and distri- buting the revenue? "A right to tax implies a right to destroy" and the Uni- ted States must be "supreme" in the use of "means."!!!!!

BILLS ON NEW-ORLEANS.

The ruinous effect of anticipating the sale of produce at New-Orleans by Bills drawn on that place and sold to the Banks, is now sensibly felt by every class of citizens.

The course taken by these instru- ments is this: A man wishes to turn tra- der and exporter of produce, but has no money; he draws a bill on some trading house in New-Orleans payable in 60 or 90 days, and sells it to some Bank at a considerable discount. With the money thus obtained he buys up produce and ex- ports it to New-Orleans.—In the mean time the Bank sells his bill or sends it down to that place. When his produce arrives there, the buyers know that he of course they will not give him full price for his articles, believing that he will be obliged to sell at any price. They are not disappointed. He waits until his bill is due or nearly so, and then sells at a reduced price.

This is the operation of those bills which have been praised by some as very beneficial to the export trade of the coun- try, and for the introduction of which the United States branch banks have been much commended.

Did the consequences fall only on the speculators without funds, it would not be a subject of much regret; but so great is the number of bills, and so fatal is their operation, that they cause a gen- eral depresssion in the price of produce, which extends also to the exporter on real capital and the farmer.

Thus these FACILITIES FOR EXPORTA- TION are, by depressing the price, the greatest of curses to the export trade of the Western country.

Arrived in this town last week, Admi- ral George Tate, of the Russian Navy, on a visit to his relatives and friends who reside in this place and vicinity. Admi- ral Tate came with his parents to this country from England when between one and two years of age and resided in that part of Falmouth called Stroudwater.— At the age of twenty he left this for the West Indies, and thence to England— and soon entered the Russian service— in which he has continued ever since, a period of forty-eight years, and by his merit and good conduct, as an officer and gentleman, has risen to the first rank and command in his profession—Adm. Tate, is also a member of the Russian Senate, the highest court of the Empire.

The following letter has been addressed to us and we have endeavoured to ac- quire information on the subject to which it relates. NEW-ORLEANS, March 13, 1819.

SIRS

About the 24th of Jan. last, I got in company with a boat descending the Mississippi river, some short distance below the mouth of Ohio; which boat was commanded by a young man about twen- ty-five years of age, about five feet nine inches high, blind of an eye; his name I do not recollect, but have been inform- ed that his first name was Joseph; his loading was cider-royal, corn, axehelves, &c. From the conduct of the person I rather suppose that he was only a super- cargo for some other man. He told me he came out of the Kentucky river, I think from Frankfort. There were two other hands on board, their names I do not know. The one was a low heavy set fel- low, about 22, the other was not quite so heavy, red beard and light complection, about the same age of the other two. The latter was discharged by the captain at Bayou Sara; after which I never saw a- ny thing more of them. But on my arri- val at this place I was informed that two suspicious fellows had sold out such load- ing as I have described; that one was confined and the other had fled.

While I was at Bayou Sara, there were two persons took passage on the boat spoken of, and shortly after I heard the report that it was supposed that these men had murdered some persons and plundered this boat. I sent one of my hands to the prison who recognized this man to be one that had taken passage; he asked how he came by the boat, and he answered that he had contracted for it, and that the two young men had gone home to Kentucky. I immediately made search for the boat, (knowing that I should recollect the boat) and found it was positively the same. On the deck boards was to be seen blood in different parts, as well as near the fire, and con- sequently assassination must have been there last. Some persons were sworn & said that a piece of a skull and a tooth was found under the floor, and I myself witnessed considerable blood in the same part of the boat. On one of the carlins or joists of the boat was written Down- ing which I recollected to have seen shortly after I first came in company with the boat.

I state these circumstances to you that if there be an owner of said cargo in your neighbourhood, that he may have some idea of the fate of his property. The fellows had considerable cash.

I live in Pittsburgh, (Pa.) and am now on my way thither, via. New-York.

I am your's, &c.

LONDON, March 18.

The issues of silver from the Bank of England to the London bankers, recom- menced yesterday. Each house, we are informed, may now receive a liberal sup- ply, equally beneficial to their new con- cerns, and essential to the general acco- modation of the public. It is probable, too, that the issues of gold may also, in a short time, be increased with safety, as sovereigns, which lately bore a premium for exportation of 10d each, will now produce only 5d above the nominal va- lue.

Letters from Manchester state, that more than 500 young poplars have re- cently been cut from a single plantation near Stockport, for the purpose, as is sup- posed, of being employed to form the handles for pikes. Great fears are en- tertained throughout this important man- ufacturing district, that the sufferings of the laboring classes will lead to some act of a desperate nature; but the magis- trates, who are well aware of the existing state of things, will be prepared, it is be- lieved, with efficient measures for preser- ving the public peace.—Times.

THE JEWS.

In the year 1290, in the reign of Ed- ward I. the property of all the Jews in England was confiscated to the use of the crown; 280 of them were hanged in one day, charged with adulterating the coin. Above 15,000 of these unfortunate peo- ple, in that reign, were plundered of all their wealth, and banished the kingdom. In the year 1818, in the reign of George III. Mr. Rothschild, a celebrated Jew, was at the head of most of the loans to the European kings and emperors. How re- markably do these facts speak in favor of the progress of liberal and enlightened opinions in this country!

OR PORTABLE KITCHENS.

MANUFACTURED and sold by HENRY MILLER, in Second street, two doors from the corner of Wood streets, Pittsburgh.

This Stove with fixtures complete, compris- es every necessary article of apparat us for an extensive cooking establishment.

The different sizes are calculated to do the cooking for small or large families, public houses and Steam-boats, and are so extremely simple in their construction as to be managed with ease by a child, twelve or fourteen years of age.

The circumstance of these Stoves having got into very general use at the eastward, within 2 or 3 years past, particularly in the cities of New- York and Baltimore, with the rapid sale and general approbation they have met with since their first introduction last winter, west of the mountains, are sufficient testimonials of their utility and advantage.

PATENT GAS FIRE,

FOR STEAM BOAT.

A CONCENTRATED FUEL for Steam-Boats has been invented, consisting of Tar or other carbonaceous substance, commingled with Steam,

The apparatus is simple; the management easy and safe. It is a great auxiliary to a wood or coal fire, which it both enlivens, encreases and saves—for it seems to combine so rapidly with the oxygen of the air, as to prevent the wood from wasting or consuming so fast as usual, the blaze, notwithstanding, being very active and intense.

The apparatus consists of a double vessel of copper or iron, cylindrical, lying on its side, upon or rather between the boilers, if there are 2.

Tar, Turpentine, Rosin, Spirits, Oil, or other combustible fluid, being put into the inner one, steam is allowed to flow from the boiler through a pipe and cock into the space between and thro' a few holes on the upper side of the inner one to press on the surface of the tar, which being heated by the surrounding steam, is at pleasure driven out through a small pipe (having a stop cock) meeting and uniting with another pipe leading out steam from the space between—the continuation of the pipe then leads to the fire or flue. The longer this pipe (if kept hot) the better. It need not be more than a quarter of an inch in diameter.

In its way the tar is extremely attenuated and mingling with the steam. Some chemists are of opinion that by the attraction of its carbon, it decomposes the steam into the constituents of water, oxygen and hydrogen, and combines with them to form the highly inflamable Gasses, carbonic-acid and carburetted hydrogen, or if not thus formed in the pipe, they are produced at or near its orifice, which need not be more than the tenth of an inch diameter for a boiler of consi lerable size.

The only art in management, is to graduate the flow of the tar and steam to such proportion as that neither shall appear to predominate, and in taking care that the fluid be previously strained so as not to obstruct the pipe by any extraneous particles. This will easily be done by placing a seive over the reservoir, from which a pipe (having a stop cock) leads into one end of and a stop cock to draw the condensed steam from between the two vessels, formed there in the beginning of the operation, while the tar was at a low temperature. Its position on the boilers will, however soon heat it. Tar boils only at a much higher temperature than water—there is therefore no danger from it.

The advantages of this kind of fuel will be very great in long passages. No steam boat or vessel can navigate the Ocean without it; and it will be found economical and convenient in every situation.

Being of recent origin, it has not been put in practice in many instances, but in several, under my own observation, and witnessed by many persons, its effects are admirable.

This advertisement is intended to offer its use gratis to a few boats, whose proprietors shall first obtain a licence. The price of this improvement afterwards will be several thousand dollars per boat, which it will be found economical in most situations to pay. The patent right for local use will be for sale after its value shall be further tested.

Licences to use this invention will be granted by

JOHN L. SULLIVAN,
Assignee of the patent of Samuel Morey.
